“Daddy loved to have people around, and was always the life of the party. He was the biggest practical jokester that ever lived. One of the jokes he loved to pull was getting people to open a book he had. It would shock the crap of you. Daddy was also a huge fan of George Jones, and Elvis. He also liked Conway Twitty. When I was a kid, we were in Nashville. He pretended to be Conway Twitty, and was having us come to him for autographs. Well there were a couple of people that believed him. Daddy was also the best salesperson. He could sale someone their own shirt off their back. So hard to believe he is gone. I love you Daddy with all my heart. You will be missed here on earth, but I know you, Jeffery, Mamaw, and Papaw are watching over us. I will see you again one day.
